THE TERRIBLE TORNADO.

FULLER DETAILS-A HORRIBLE LULL IN THE STORM-SKETCH OF THE TOWN OF MOUNT

The force of the terrible blast was such as to uproot the firmest buildings, lasting four or five minutes, and leaving ruin and desolation in its track. The tornado was accompanied by a violent noise, which in itself was harrowing, followed by crash after crash, as one edifice after mother yielded to the blasting breath. A comparative caim followed, which aroused the an-A comparative caim followed, which aroused the anfortunate people to a realization of the horror. Soon a report spread that this and that building was blown down, among them two schoolhouses; but fortunately it was at such an hour when they were vacant of their pupils. Notwithstanding this the report was given that the fall of the schools had killed a large number of children, which, happily, is not confirmed by later information. The tornado in hacif was a sufficiently great calamity, but it was followed by a destructive fire in the rains of the demolished structures. The flames spread rapidly under the lanning of the destructive breeze, and threatened the destroyal or the entire place. The fire department of Vincennes was called upon to render assistance, and immediately responded by scholing two engines and a good force of men to assist in checking the flames and help the citizens in charitable work. Princeton rendered the same service, and at hine o'clock last evening a special train on the Air Line Railroad took out a number of workers.

Mount Carmel is the county seat of Wabash county, lilinois, and is situated on the western bank of the Wabash river, about forty mines above its mouth, and practically at the head of navigation on that river. It is also on the Caire and Vincennes Railroad and at the crossing of that road and the Princeton Air Line Railroad. Mount Carmel had shout 2,500 inhabitants, of an enterprising, industrious character, who took great pride in their town. It was one of the precises places
in lilinois, and was situated on an undulating country, somewat elevated above the surrounding prospect.
The country for miles about was prairie land, which left Mount Carmel right in the sweep of the biast which are so frequently leit
in that section. Mount Carmel, by reason of its exposure, was subject to violent storms, but nover beiore has it been visited by any of a very sections astera.
It is astonishing to read of the destruction of the Court House, for that building was a ver fortunate people to a realization of the horror. Soon

LINES OF NEW DEPARTURE.

New Hampshire Politicians Opposed to a New Party.

DEFIANT DEMOCRATS

Claim of Congressmen to Manipulate Federal Offices.

SENATOR ROLLINS' POSITION.

President Hayes Indorsed by Democrats Criticised by the Republicans.

CONCORD, N. M., June 6, 1877. Extended investigation in the Granite State proves but politics are in a complicated and interesting con appearances indicate, any attempt to organize a new political party in this State. The reasons are plainty these:—The democrats were never more united that they are just now or freer from internal party distract tions, and the republicans—seven-eighths of them at least—feel so assured that an effective check can be given to what they may deem a too liberal policy on the part of Hayes, through the influence of Blaine and his sympathizers, that they have never for a moment enteriained the most shadowy idea of party reconstruction. But the exceptional party—the thick and thin supporters of the President's policy, as it has been demonstrated, or, as it may be declared, the one-eighth minority of the republican party in the State—includes the office-holding section, the Post Office and Custom House men and others, and, numerically as and Custom House men and others, and, numerically as well as financially, their a cossion from the Blains worshippers would sericusly affect the party strength. New Hampshire republicanism could not succeed di-vested of "the cohesive force of public pluader," and the pecuniary aid which annually proceeds therefrom at election times. The question is with the minority whether loyalty to the government or loyalty to the party leaders in the State will pay best; and who, in this ultra-moral age, would dispute the superior at-

THE REPUBLICANS AND THE SITUATION.

To undertake to "interview" republicans, even of the most excited "stalwart" school in this State, is a thing verging on the impossible. They will, however, readily assert the opinion that Hayes' Southern policy was a gross mistake, that disappointment and wrong could only follow it, although their hopes were high that it might turn out otherwise. Hopes mixed in their expression with groanings, sighings and most doubtful head-shakings cannot be largely depended on for their fervency, and these are very common accom paniments of those hopeful wishes. As to the civil service policy of the government, threatened only so far, republicans who speak of it do so with every evidence of dissatisfaction. One of them whose party status cannot be questioned, but whose opinion was given on condition that his name should not be associated with it publicly, said on this our Congressmen of the favor and right to recommend men to fill tederal offices within their State and Congressional districts is one of the most deadly blows he can strike against the republican interest in New Hampshire; for to the energy, influence and deterpointed to office because of such qualities in the man agement of political matters has our party been indebted for years for the conservation of its integrity and strength. If Mr. Hayes' policy is carried out and our Congressmen are to have nothing to do with local appointments to office, our party will forthwith be decimated. There will result a total surrender of the means of procuring hereafter what "sinews of war" the customs and exigencies of political warlare have for years past demanded. Our working force will be restricted up to the point of its destruction. We will be left with most imperiect organization and show a consequent impaired party strength. If Hayes shall persist in ignoring what I contend are the just rights and privileges of our Congressmen, every friend he may make independently of their nominations will make him fifty enemies within our party. And if he makes appointments outside the republican party dissatisfaction therowith will show greater opposing con-satisfaction therewith will show greater opposing consequences.

'President Franklin Pierce, believing that the era of good political feeling during which he was elected justified him, made many public appointments outside his party lines. What was the consequence? For every step he thus took aside he made a hundred enemies for every friend. I say it will prove the same with Mr. Hayos. I say it will largely contribute to the ruis of the republican party everywhere if he makes ability and strict devotion to duly—and these alone—the sole condition of office-holding. As a professed the sole condition of office-holding. As a professed republican he can have no possione justification in adhering to such process. It is decreed that men who hold office must attend to their own business, and let all pointical exertion, beyond simple voting, alone, chaos will come here in New Hampshire and everywhere else where our party holds power at present."

A NON-COMMITTAL SENATOR.

Our junior Senator, Hon, E. H. Rollins, has no ambitton whatever to be interviewed on any subject of present or prospective political interest. He intensilies, however, in this way in reference to the Southern polity of Hayes:—

"Whatever actions of the government may be founded on right and justice, these will I approve and support."

As to what effect Mr. Blaine's influence might, here.

on right any justice, these will approve and sup-port."

As to what effect Mr. Blaine's influence might bere-after have on the party loyatty, or regarding what power, it any, that gentleman had on mouiding the sentiments of his republican compatitots in the shape of an opposition to Hayes, the honorable gentle-man decided that there was no option to spend on such a very improbable contingency. Perhaps he has not been sumitted far enough into the ring to have safe understanding in the matter; indeed, it is said that there are political family reasons why he should not penetrate the secrets of the grand lodge of leaders at the present time.

sale understanding in the matter; indeed, it is said that there are political family reasons why he should not penetrate the secrets of the grand lodge of leaders at the present time.

THE NEW HAMPBHIRE DEMOCRACY.

After living among the New Hampshire democrate or a lew weeks and conversing with them irequently no one could remain bilind to their poculiarities. One of the oldest and travest of the Old Guard—one who has never forfeited a particle of his attachment to his party—peaking of the new party rumors, said:—

"I have, during my political experience, watched with much interest the insuguration of more than one new party, and I have noted that they have been inspired and controlled for the advancement of the doubtful and evil purposes of men of more than questionable political character and instincts, but who professed to own all the honesty and patriotism extant. I have learned to give little credit and to put less reliance on that kina of political virtue which exades very suddenly from the festering heaps of political rottennesses, and is preached by men whose scalorry has been as loudly pronounced in layor of the vices they would rebuke, so long as they shared in their dividends. New party men, when they aim at sineng off portions of existing parties, have invariably kept the most remunerative pieces to themselves, and I have no pattence with such parasites. A new party movement among the democratic idea respecting the layorices of public sentiment. Their President (who has a conscience about him), is a proof of its truth and value in the mind of an honest man who is forced by his oath and honor to beed and obey that troth. Why, then, should democrate think about a new party when their special noticy is so approved and acted upon? Why should they pick up strange generals when their own are so skilful and their armes are galoing strength through desertions from the enemy every undedity, presently, probably or possibly, can be charged against New Hampshire democrats." THE COIN QUESTION.

[From the St. Louis Times.] The only tangible objection to the use of allver with gold in the payment of bonds is found in the statement that silver is at present cheaper than gold. Granted; but it was a wrong act to make silver cheape than gold. The same reasoning that would compel us to pay the bonds in gold could compel us to pay them to pay the bonds in gold could compel us to pay them in diamonds. The same reasoning could compel us to pay two dollars for one. It is no wonder that the people who must pay the bonds have been restive under the continued exactions and extortions of the people who own them. They really show great liberality in offering to compromise on the basis of the old specie currency. They are accused of wishing to pay their debts in a cheaper currency than that in which they were contracted, when the truth is that their creditors wish them to pay in a much more costly currency than that in which they were contracted. They say:—"Let legislation undo what it has wrongfully done, and restore the coin relations which it has unjustly disturbed. They let all debts that were not contracted in gold be made payable in celu, as they used to be and of right ought to be."
